TRADEMARKS USAGE AND MISUSE POLICY

1.0 Background:
Idealliance has made a practice of making logos, seals, and certificates available to members and participants of Idealliance to illustrate their support of Idealliance, achievements in certification programs, promotion, and affiliation usage. It is critical; however, Idealliance protect its independence and integrity in relation to its non-profit status and anti-trust requirements. From time to time misuse of names and logos, either of Idealliance, or its programs, is reported to Idealliance or uncovered through our own inspection.

Often this takes the form of incorrect use of a logo format or use of a name or logo on a product, program, affiliation, or document that does not have the right to make that claim. Frequently these are errors are based on misunderstandings, but sometimes these are intentionally fraudulent.

Whatever the reason, Idealliance investigates each case to ensure that the value of names and logos is not undermined intentionally or unintentionally. We use an established procedure of communication with any offender as part of the Idealliance policy on third party misuse of trademarks. If after a series of exchange of letters, we are not satisfied with the actions taken by the offender, we will make public the misuse on this page so that both the trade, regulators and consumers may be aware of the misuse.

If after this public naming, the offense is still not resolved, Idealliance will take legal action.

3.0 Policy: Certification, Qualification or Verification Marks
A certification mark is any word, symbol, design, device, or combination of these used in connection with goods or services of persons other than the owner of the mark to certify origin, material, mode of manufacture, quality, accuracy, or other characteristics of the goods or services. By using a certification mark, the user is indicating that it has been certified by the owner of the certification mark to carry the mark and that it meets the criteria for certification.

The presence of an Idealliance certification or verification mark assures consumers that the product or service is in full compliance with the published Idealliance specifications. Proper and consistent use of the certification mark is very important in maintaining the consumer assurance. Therefore, it is important that all usage guidelines are followed to ensure that the certification mark retains its value and utility in the industry.

Certification marks may only be used when certification is granted by Idealliance. Upon certification, Idealliance will deliver a version of the certification mark for online use and another version suitable for use on printed materials.
